

NEWS

Bloodstained Men to protest circumcision in Nashville

Todd Barnes tbarnes@tennessean.com

Published 7:33 p.m. CT Oct. 27, 2014

Travelers on Charlotte Pike on Friday could see protesters against circumcision who will be wearing white pants with mock bloodstains.

Bloodstained Men & Their Friends, a national child circumcision protest group, will be in Nashville to protest circumcisions performed on male children. The group says children should have the right to choose whether to be circumcised. Genital autonomy activists view the genital cutting of a non-consenting person as a human rights violation.

The protest will be along Charlotte Pike from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.