

Anti-circumcision group pickets near Salisbury University

10 PHOTOS

2:58 p.m. EDT May 11, 2016

Protestors from the Blood Stained Man stand at the intersection in front of the Perdue School of Business on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Jason Fairfield, an investment banker from Miami, protests at the corner of College Avenue and Route 13 on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury.
STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Multiple signs criticizing circumcision were arranged around the intersection of College Avenue and Route 13 on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury. The nonprofit group based out of California is a secular organization of approximately 150 members from across the United States.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Jason Fairfield protests circumcision in Salisbury on Wednesday, May 11.
STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

A protestor stands out in front of the Salisbury University Perdue School of Business in Salisbury on Wednesday, May 11.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

A protestor stands at the intersection of College Avenue and Route 13 on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Brother K, short for "kind" protests circumcision in Salisbury on Wednesday, May 11.
STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Blood Stained Men leader Brother K stands at the intersection of Route 13 and College Avenue on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury. K, a Californian with a journalism degree from the University of Illinois, started protesting circumcision in 1980 and formed the group in 2012.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

Blood Stained Men leader, Brother K from California, protests on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE

A miniature protestor stands at the corner of College Avenue and Route 13 on Wednesday, May 11 in Salisbury.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRIAN REESE