TWIN FALLS, Idaho (KMVT/KSVT) The Great Northwest Circumcision Crisis protesters made a stop in Twin Falls Wednesday.

This protest was the eighth stop on their tour which runs through July 27.

Protesters could be seen on the corner of Pole Line Road and Blue Lakes Boulevard holding signs and wearing costumes to display their cause.

They were on site from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"We realize that we can't change everybody's mind but as I told my colleagues the other day, the most important thing we can do is make sure that there's no one left in America that can say that they've never heard opposition to circumcision," said protester, Jason Fairfield.

Members refer to themselves as "in-tactivists" and are on a 15 day protest event.

They say that Idaho has offered one of the warmest and most understanding reception to their visit.

They head to Boise Thursday.
